PROGRAM INFORMATION

You are strongly encouraged to develop a thematic specialization within women's studies, the nucleus of which is drawn from the Women's and Gender Studies Area requirements. Your specialization can assist you in career, service, and graduate school placements.

Through this academic plan, you develop critical and independent thinking, reading, and writing skills by evaluating cross-disciplinary, multi-ethnic, and international scholarship on women's lives; sex and gender roles and identities; and feminist histories, theories, and methodologies. This plan also helps you to discover how race, class, ethnicity, nationality, sexual orientation, and age shape gender identity and to understand gender as a category of analysis in the context of many disciplines and their methodologies.

Specializations can include feminist theory and practice; feminist methodology; race and feminism; image, representation, and feminism; the history and practice of feminist activism; feminism, development, and globalization; feminism and sexuality; international feminism; women, community, and change; feminist narratives; and other such themes.

Please be aware that a grade of "D" will not count for major credit. Although a course in which the grade earned is a "D" does not have to be retaken, you must complete 42 units in the major with a grade of "C" or better in order to fulfill your plan degree requirements.
