ID PRODUCTS & MATERIALS

Information on products and materials is essential to selecting Furniture, Fixtures, and Materials to complete interior design projects. After selection comes budgeting and specification which are only possible if you know the manufacturer or where to look for appropriate options. This section aims to expedite the process described above and to expose students to manufacturers and resources they might never have heard of. A direct link to this section is included on the right side of pages on the NAU ID website through the blue icon above.

- Health Facility Planning
- Health Facilities — Design and Construction
- Hospitals — Design and Construction
- Hospital Design and Construction
- Long Term Care Facilities
- Medical Centers

Healthcare design can be challenging to research in that you must know something about the medical condition that the environment will help to treat. Facilities, environmental psychology and evidence-based research and design are all important parts of the process.

To get started, make sure you have all of the applicable terms for a medical condition. NAU has Gale Virtual Reference Library (http://library.nau.edu/clinedb/47) with the Gale Encyclopedia of Medicine. You may also find some of the books mentioned as e-books. You can either search, or go to specific books to browse.

HISTORICAL FURNITURE STYLES

Historical Styles I & II provide an overview of the history of Western design in furniture, interiors, and architecture considered within the cultural context of each period. Historical Styles I covers the ancient world through 1820: lectures, videos, readings, and assignments focus on the development of major forms, period styles and ornament from ancient Egypt through the Neoclassical Era. Historical Styles II focuses on the history of Western furniture, interiors, and architecture in the 19th and 20th centuries: styles examined include 19th-century revival styles, Arts and Crafts, Art Deco, European and American Modernism, and the International Style.

After completing these courses you will:

- Understand the historical development of interiors and design styles.
- Recognize characteristics of the major periods and styles.
- Understand how political, cultural and technological changes contribute to changes in style.
- Understand historic design theories (Vitruvian classicism, Palladianism, Neoclassicism, etc).
- Be familiar with basic decorative arts vocabulary and terms.
- Become aware of how historic design relates to contemporary interiors.

ARCHITECTURE STYLES

General Information Sources

Books listed are surveys of world architecture which cover a broad range of historic periods.

This book surveys architectural styles from early civilizations to the twentieth century. Many photos, plans and elevations.

Fletcher, Banister. A History of Architecture on the Comparative Method.
A comprehensive history of the world's architecture, this book is arranged by period and then by country within the period. Included for each style are sections on architectural character, examples of typical buildings and a bibliography.

Pevsner, Nikolaus. An Outline of European Architecture.
The architecture of Western civilization is described historically by period and style from the ninth to the twentieth century.

This book is aimed at the interested layman who has little knowledge of technical terms. It presents the history of building styles from early antiquity to the present. It is heavily illustrated with line drawings, plans and details.

Volume one introduces twelve periods from Egyptian to modern and then gives a few photos but mostly line drawings of plans, elevations and sections of representative buildings. Volume two covers twelve countries in the same format.

Architectural Styles — United States

Over 200 photos from the Historic American Buildings Survey serve to illustrate 39 different styles from Spanish Colonial to Art Moderne. There is a "Pictorial Glossary of Terms" arranged by architectural element.

This book is divided into two parts. The first deals with European traditions in American Vernacular domestic architecture. The next chapters treat the classic period styles from Georgian to International. A final chapter discusses recent design developments. Excellent line drawings throughout.

This book presents a chronological evolution of architecture in the U.S. Each chapter deals with several phases in a particular time period and then gives a brief description of outstanding buildings in the style grouped by public and residential categories.

Poppeliers, John C. What Style is This? / Washington DC.: Preservation News, 1977. Reprinted from HISTORIC PRESERVATION these four chapters deal chronologically with periods in American architectural history. There are brief sketches of style, some photographs and a separate glossary that is illustrated with line drawings.

Whiffen, Marcus. American Architecture Since 1780: a guide to styles / Cambridge, MA: M.I.T. Press, c1996. This book is arranged chronologically by period with a brief introduction to each followed by a history of the style and then individual bibliographic references at the end of each section. There are pictorial illustrations (but no plans) and a brief glossary.
