About this Report and Resource Guide

What is the Purpose of this Report and Resource Guide?

This report and resource guide is part of a larger study focused on the assets of family caregivers to loved ones with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias (ADRD) living in northern Arizona. For this project, northern Arizona includes Apache, Coconino, Gila, Mohave, Navajo, and Yavapai counties. The study is about the characteristics of caregivers in our area, and the resources they use and still need in order to provide care to their loved ones, while also taking care of their own physical, emotional, and mental well-being. The study has multiple parts: 1) focus groups and surveys of caregivers, 2) interviews with policymakers and service providers, and 3) a mapping project which produced the resource guide.

The resource guide summarizes and lists ADRD services and social support resources that are available or that are needed to support family caregivers in northern Arizona. In the report, excerpts from the surveys, focus groups and interviews help illustrate the experiences that caregivers have had with these resources. This report highlights key information and provides recommendations about resources needed to best support caregivers in northern Arizona.

What is in this Document?

This report is split into two major sections. The first section provides an overview of ADRD and caregiving in northern Arizona. It describes how the population and different services and resources are geographically distributed, as well as the challenges that caregivers face. The report section ends with a summary and policy recommendations for improving access to important services and resources.

The second section consists of the resource guide which includes contact information for different types of resources used by family caregivers to loved ones with ADRD. Many of the resources are mapped so that they may be readily identified in the community. The maps of the resources can also be used to identify areas where resources are available or more limited. There are separate sections for:

- General information about ADRD and caregiving
- Caregiver support groups
- Senior and community centers
- Home health services
- Assisted living facilities
- Hospice services

Where does the Information in the Resource Guide come from?

The contact information for the resources in this guide is taken from several different sources. First, we purchased a business listing of senior centers, home health, assisted living, and hospice locations from a company called InfoGroup. We used other state and local sources to find support groups and informational resources, such as:

- The local Area Agencies on Aging
- The Alzheimer's Association
- Arizona In-Home Care Association
- The Spotlight Prescott Senior Services Listing
- The Harmony Home Care Guide for Verde Valley
- Guides developed by the Hospice of Havasu in Havasu City and Bullhead City

Contact information from the different sources was carefully cross-checked. A team member telephoned service locations to fill in missing information.

PLEASE NOTE: This guide was created during the COVID-19 pandemic. Some of the locations could not be reached to verify information and others may have closed or moved since we created the list.

Northern Arizona and its Caregivers

What is ADRD and who are Caregivers to Individuals with ADRD?

In this report, we will talk about caregivers to persons with ADRD, which stands for Alzheimer's Disease and related dementias. These different dementias can include vascular dementia, mixed dementia, Lewy body dementia, and Parkinson's disease dementia.

The focus of this guide is on unpaid family members or friend caregivers, who are involved in supporting and caring for their loved ones with ADRD. In Arizona, family caregivers provide about 357 million hours of unpaid care each year¹.

Caregivers in northern Arizona provide daily support to their loved ones with ADRD. Caregivers must balance the care needs of their loved one with ADRD, while also managing their own health and wellness. They have many strengths which include resilience, devotion, creativity, willingness to learn, and strong advocacy skills.

"Their dedication to caring for their loved ones is amazing because they don't have a lot of resources often. They don't have a lot of financial resources along with social support...They put a lot of time and effort and love into caring for their loved ones... we don't have very many skilled nursing facilities. There's just not enough."

-Northern Arizona Healthcare Provider

The depth and breadth of care provided by caregivers also means that they face many challenges. Caregivers in our focus groups identified some of the challenges they manage, including:

- Admitting they require help from time to time
- Managing their own health and well-being
- Being isolated
- Watching their loved ones with ADRD change over time and coping with these changes
- Facing uncertainty about the future

Arizona will be Home to more People with ADRD as the Population Ages

The population in Arizona is aging quickly, which means we can expect the number of people with ADRD to increase. In Arizona, there are more than 1.6 million people aged 60 years and older and this number is expected to reach three million by 2030. About 140,000 Arizonans aged 65 and older are diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, and this is expected to increase to 200,000 by 2025, which would rank Arizona as the state with one of the most rapidly growing number of residents with ADRD, second only to Alaska^{2,3}.

As the number of people with ADRD in Arizona increases, the need for family caregivers and more services will increase, as well. Figure 1 shows that there are many parts of Northern Arizona where more than 25% of the population are aged 65 or older.

Caregivers in Northern Arizona Face Additional Challenges

In the United States, most health and social services for caregivers and their loved ones with ADRD are located in large cities⁴. As shown in figure 2, northern Arizona is mostly rural and there are only a few cities with more than 50,000 people. Living outside of urban areas makes it hard to reach health and social services without careful planning. Problems with weather, internet and telephone connections, travel, and scheduling appointments make caregiving for a loved one with ADRD more stressful⁵.

"We don't have a lot of the resource of time and freedom to shop and to search and to go get things and bring them home. And we are homebound and we're just isolated out here. We live on an island."

-Northern Arizona Caregiver

Northern Arizona is also a very diverse region and many of the resources currently available are not always culturally relevant (e.g. consider the traditions, values, beliefs, and unique needs of each group). Figure 3 shows there are many areas where Native

“She [loved one with ADRD] needs to hear it in Navajo and she needs to hear it in English, and if it's just repeating the same thing then she has a better idea of what they're going for.”

-Northern Arizona Caregiver

Americans or Hispanic/Latino groups are at least 25% of the population, and many live in more rural areas of northern Arizona. Some caregivers from these communities face additional challenges when interacting with service providers because of their isolation and differences in language or culture⁶. A limited number of service providers are able to meet the needs of rural and diverse caregivers in northern Arizona, amidst the challenges.

Helpful Resources and Remaining Gaps

Healthcare and social service providers, leaders, and caregivers identified resources they value most. However, not all of the resources are available in northern Arizona. Participants specifically mentioned the following as valuable or potentially valuable:

- Education and classes about ADRD
- Organizations that specialize in ADRD issues
- Support from Veteran's services, faith-based groups, other support groups
- Financial planning services
- Transportation services
- Food assistance programs
- Respite services
- Supported living options, including assisted living with memory care
- Programs that reimburse family caregivers
- In-home supports, such as home health and paid caregivers
- Speech therapy (cognitive changes and communication strategies)
- Memory cafés (none are currently available in Northern Arizona)

Focus group participants also identified caregiver needs that still require attention. Many said they struggle to find information on the kinds of resources their loved one needs and can become overwhelmed in their search. Participants specifically identified things that could be improved:

- System navigation
- Easier ways to find resources available in their community
- Providers who understand ADRD
- Culturally-relevant and locally available services
- Locally available specialists who can assist with obtaining an ADRD diagnosis, as a diagnosis is often necessary to access resources

"If someone would have a booklet or a class or a website saying: here's how to take care of your older patients and transition and this is what you're going to need and look out for that."

-Northern Arizona Caregiver

As shown in Table 1, participants in our survey of 156 caregivers reported that they rely on their friends and family for help about as often as they rely on paid professionals, but friends and family are particularly important for emotional support.

Table 1: Percent who currently receive caregiver supports

Type of support	From Informal Sources (friends or family)	From Formal Sources (paid professionals)
Emotional support (counseling or just someone to listen to you)	61%	36%
Physical support (help with home-health kinds of tasks)	35%	39%
Temporary relief from caregiving (respite)	38%	30%

As the maps in this report and resource guide show, many areas have limited resources outside of cities and towns. There are also differences in where resources are distributed between counties. Table 2 summarizes how many major resources are located across the different counties of northern Arizona, from the most populated to the least populated.

Table 2: ADRD Resources by County

		Percent of the Total Population in each county who are...				Senior Centers			Assisted Living
Region	Total Pop.	Age 65+	White	Hispanic	Native American	All	Offers Day-Care	Home Health	All	Mem. Unit	Hospice
Yavapai	224,645	30%	81%	14%	1%	11	3	32	66	24	15
Mohave	206,064	29%	78%	16%	2%	4	0	27	35	14	16
Coconino	140,217	12%	54%	14%	27%	9	0	12	14	6	6

Northern Arizona	804,553	23%	63%	14%	19%	47	3	93	147	51	44

Most of the resources are in Yavapai and Mohave counties, where there are larger cities and more retirement communities⁷. However, some resources are over-represented there, and there are too few in the other counties. For instance, 36% of the northern Arizona population aged 65 or older lives in Yavapai county, and 45% of the assisted living facilities are located there. Yavapai county also has the most specialized care locations for ADRD persons, including all of the day-care services at senior centers and nearly half of all memory care units that are in assisted living facilities⁸.

Senior Centers are the only resource more likely to be in highly rural and diverse counties, but the types of services specifically for ADRD caregivers vary greatly from center to center. Hospice is particularly needed in Navajo and Apache counties where most older adults who are Native Americans live, adding to the challenges that these caregivers face⁹.

Next Steps and Policy Recommendations

This report is intended to provide a succinct picture of the needs and priorities of caregivers to individuals with ADRD in northern Arizona, a very rural and diverse area. As noted in the maps of resources (which coincide with information from interviews, focus groups and surveys), caregivers would benefit from programmatic and policy changes to expand access to needed resources in the region.

Local and regional government officials, government agencies and advocacy groups can use results of this report to advocate for needed changes in the region to support family caregivers. These include:

- Increasing access to care by developing more financially and geographically available services.
- Allowing for flexibility in implementation of caregiver support resources so communities can make them culturally-relevant.
- Establishing mechanisms that assist caregivers with identifying caregiver support and system navigation.
- Providing training to health and social service providers on ADRD and ways they can support caregivers.
- Ensuring easier access to required specialists (i.e. neurology, gerontologist)
- Establishing additional specialized ADRD care locations, such as senior day care and memory units, to improve caregiver supports in more rural and diverse areas.
- Expanding programs and services specific to ADRD and caregiver support among senior centers that already exist in rural and diverse areas.
- Promoting the development of dementia friendly communities throughout the region (<https://www.dfamerica.org/>).

Caregiver Support Groups

Most caregiver support groups in northern Arizona are conducted by hard-working volunteers. The meeting places and times change frequently to accommodate the needs of caregivers who are a part of the group. Please also note that the information about in-person support groups listed below was collected before the COVID-19 pandemic. It is still uncertain which support groups will resume meeting in-person. Please check with the organizer before you show up to any of these events.
